Wales Suggests Equal Treatment For Welsh

LONDON — Saunders Lewis of the Welsh Nationalist Party, demanded today that the Government give treatment to Wales equal to that which it gave Czechoslovak Sudetenland in Adolf Hitler's interest.

Wales should be accorded official status as regards to culture and language, as the British government urged in behalf of the Sudetenland, Lewis said, and depressed areas in South Wales should be given same consideration accorded depressed areas in Sudetenland.

53c CAUSES COMPLICATION

JACKSON, Miss.—Relations between the State of Mississippi and the Republic of Latvia were disturbed today by a 53-cent tax claim.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull forwarded Gov. Hugh White the claim of Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary af the Republic, and explained that under certain porvisions of international law, the diplomat should be repaid the tax on eight and two-thirds gallons of gasoline bought at Hattiesburg.

The Governor handed the claim to the state motor vehicle Commissioner Howard Dyer. He studied the facts and replied there was no authority to make the refund. Forty-eight cents had been diverted to the state gasoline tax and the rest to sales and tax coffers.

The state was reoprted as being officially willing to refund the tax if a proper method could be found.

Dyer suggested that Bilmanis abandon customary diplomatic channels and write directly to the Hattiesburg station operator in order to avoid a complication international crisis.

COTTON NOTES

NEW YORK — With the approach of the government crop report on Saturday, the usual private estimates of the cotton crop have been coming out in number and range from 11,637,000 bales to 11,950,000. They compare with a government estimate of 11,825,000 bales for Sept. 1.

Announcement was made that the government estimate of November 8 will be released on schedule, despite the fact that day is election day.

CHINESE REINFORCE

SHANGHAI—The Chinese government ordered a new fleet of foreign made airplanes into action day as the Japanese reported new advances in their three-sided push on Hankow.

The planes were sent to the fronts northeast, southeast and south at Loki where Generalissimo where the Japanese, despite the staunch Chinese resistance, were slowly gaining ground.

The latest Japanese reports claimed victories along the south side of the Yangtze river near Panpaishan, and further to the south at Loki, wehre Generalissimo Kiang Kai-Shek opened his final attack on Hankow in the nationalist campaign of 1927 against the communist adminisiration.

The advance along the south bank of the Yangtze was slow and costly. The advance forces were without the aid of the motorized equipment because o fthe rough country and seas and mud caused by heavy rains. The troops were reqired to pull their artillery through the steep hills and narrow passes, oftentimes without adequate supplies. Their supply columns were attacked frequently and cut off by the Chinese forces.

The greatest Chinese resistance was at Loki. The Japanese took the town, in Northwestern Kiangsi province 30 miles west of Tehan, after a heavy battle. Japanees eports said that seven Chinese divisions were defeated there. Oc said, turned the flank of the Chinese forces defending Nanchang, important Chinese stronghold to the South.

S. S. WYOMING AIDS STORM AREA

MAIL CARRIER—Crippled transportation facilities remained so bad a week after the tropical hurricane hit New England that the United States battleship Wyoming was put into service to transport mail for Boston and the New England states from New York City. Above, the scene in Boston as the huge cargo of mail was unloaded. Death toll in New England reached 500, with fears that disease might follow the devastation.

Mike Conner In Race For Governor

Ex-Governor Mike Conner said positively today that he would run as a gubernatorial candidate in 1939.

In making the statement, Mr Conner said:

To the People of Mississipi:

In justice to you, to the general political situation, and to myself a it may affect the interests o the state, I am convinced that should not longer delay the making of a definite statement of my intentions as to the race for governor next year.

At the proper time next year, I shall make formal announcement of my candidacy for governor. I have always regarded protracted political campaigns as undesirable and unwholesome, and I shall make make mine as short as circumstances will allow.

My record as governor during the trying years from 1932 to 1936 is an open book to the people of Mississippi. I shall run solely on that record, advocating the principles and policies for which I have always stood, and seeking your suffrage wholly on my own qualifications, experience, and proven faithfulness to public trust.

When you return me to the governor's office, I shall be absolutely free, as I was before, of all handicaps or embarrassments, and, as then, my only obligation will b to the whole people. But in addition to this, I now have and will profit by the experience gained from four years of service in that office to which you elected me in 1931 as the depression's crisis approached. If I made you a good governor then, I can make you a better governor next time.

Dead issues are dead issues with me, and are buried and forgotten, along with the strife and animosities of former campaigns. My face is to the future.

Just as I seek the good will, confidence and political support of all Mississippians, without regard to class, creed, or faction, so will I strive to serve with equal faithfulness and justice to them all.

Mike Conner.

Job Insurance Claims Dropped to 1,059 Per Week

Decline In Claims Has Been Widely Diffused Throughout State

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 6—Job insurance claims from unemployed persons in Mississippi have dropped to an average of only 1,059 per week during the past five weeks, according to a statement to-day by Leon L. Wheeless, executive director of the Unemployment Compensation Commission.

This weekly load of claims compares with a weekly average of 1,786 since the first claims were taken April 1 and indicates a marked improvement in employment, Mr. Wheeless said. The decline in claims has been widely diffused throughout the state.

"In addition to this drop in initial claims, there has also been a decline in the weekly waiting reports which the claimants must file for the next two weeks and in the weekly continued claims on which checks are written if claimants are found eligible," the statement said. "Continued claims fell from 8,991 in the week of September 10 to 6,966 in the week of September 24. This decline results both from the fact that wage credits are being exhausted as payments are made on outstanding claims and from the fact that many workers are finding jobs before exhausting wage credits.

"We are preparing however for a possible increase in claims when we enter a new quarter October 1. Employment records in the second quarter of 1938 (April, May and June) will then be counted in calculating a claimant's benefit rights. Unemployed persons who have had their claims denied or their wage credits exhausted because of limited employment with covered employers will find it advisable to file new claims thru the Mississippi State Employment Service if they earned some wages from covered firms during the second quarter of the year."

"Jobs," the Commission's monthly bulletin, pointed out that employment in the state has shown a gradual tendency to rise since June. There was a decline in April, May and June, but this did little more than offset an increase which occurred during the first three months of the year. The number of employed persons is greater now than at the first of the year.

Grenada is the center of one of the world's best areas.

B. and R. Commission To Act

JACKSON—The Mississippi Building an Repair Commission will act next Tuesday on requests by state departments and institutions for repairs and improvements amounting to $2,841,731.

The commission has $1,000,000 of state funds—the full amount of the appropriation—at its disposal but pending at Washington are requests that the PWA match the state funds.

Board Of Health Examines 5,000 Factory Workers

Death Rates Are Higher Among The Industrial Population

A new angle to plans for balancing agriculture with industry has been cited by Dr J. W. Dugger, Director of Industrial Hygiene, State Board of Health, following a survey of 5,000 examinations of factory workers.

"There is evidence that sickness and death rates are higher among the industrial population of Mississippi than among the adult population generally," Doctor Dugger said.

"Industrial employees in the state number 80,000, and from results obtained on examination o 5,000 workers in Mississippi, results for the entire group of industrial workers in the state have been approximated," Doctor Dugger continued.

"Among the 80,000, there would be 4,288 cases of syphilis, 1,450 cases of malaria, 480 cases of tuberculosis, 10,688 cases of high blood pressure, and 10,406 cases of low blood pressure. About 50 per cent of industrial workers need removal of their tonsils and 11 per cent need correction of their eyes."

Continuing, Doctor Dugger said that disease experience would show that 43,000 out of the 80,000 to have had influenza, 13,000 to have had pneumonia, and 5,000 to have had pleurisy.

"It would seem, therefore," he said, "that if the general health of industrial workers in the state is to be improved it will be necessary not only to control unhealthful conditions in the working environment but also to give consideration to such factors as proper living conditions, to elimination of strain and hurry, to nutrition, and to communicable diseases; in fact to a general adult health program for workers.

"It may be said that occupational disease problems should and could be solved by industry itself," Doctor Dugger continued. "But," he said, "students of this problem know that such a procedure is no more possible than attempt of one person to control the pollution of streams or to control communicable diseases in his own home.

"Industrial hygiene is now recognized as a major public health function, affecting directly the health of a large population and indirectly the well-being and economic status of the entire community," he said.

Is Different From President's Views

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON— Chairman J. A. Farley has placed the Democratic National Committee today squarely behind all Democratic nominee in this campaign regardless of whether liberal or conservative. Farley predicted that the two-party system would prevail here for many more years.

Some persons saw in his policy statement a contrast with the recent pronouncement of President Roosevelt in favor of liberal candidates, be they Democrat or republican in name.

Mr. Roosevelt who has stepped over party lines at least twice in Nebraska and Minnesota, since entering the White House, told press September conference questionners:

"If there is a good liberal running on the Republican ticket, I would not have the slightest objection to his election. The good of the country rises above the party."

He assented then to a suggestion that a liberal reupblican owuld be more likely to vote in the national interest than would a conservative democrat.

Farley had a press conference yesterday, the first in so long that he could not remember when the previous one took place.

"All the conventions and primaries are over," he told questioners, "and I'm going to support the nominees of the party."

He was asked whether that meant support of Democratic nominees "whether they are liberal or not."

"Why certainly," the chairman replied, and explained that he was speaking only for himself and the Democratic National Committee.

"Does that mean that the President is working at cross purposes with the National Committee?" was another question.

"I wouldn't say so," Farley said.

"Do you expect the President to support liberal republicans", he was asked.

"I won't get into any argument about what the President might do," Farley replied. "That is his peroggative."

PLAN COTTON SUBSIDY

WASHINGTON — An agricultural department committee prepared today to formulate detailed methods of increasing domestic consumption of cotton.

The committee, hoping to silence the program by increasing the price of cotton, intended to develop plans for opening up new domestic markets—probably with the aid of a federal subsidy to consumers.

Harry L. Brown, assistant secretary of agriculture, probably will head the committee, named late yesterday by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace. Other members of the committee were: Hastin G. White, agriculture department solicitor, Jesse P. Tapp and Alfred D. Steadman, assistant administrators of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration; I. W. Dugan, director of the Southern Division of the AAA; and Lawrence Myers, Chief of the AAA marketing section.

Before making recommendations the group will confer with representatives of all branches of the textile industry.

From all indications, a subsidy for consumers will be one of the major problems before the committee. The subsidy would make possible the sale of cheap cotton goodsf to low-income of relief groups that now consume little cotton. Persons in higher-income groups would not be allowed to buy the subsidized products.

Virtually the entire department some officials said, supported the principle of a consumer subsidy. Distribution of the subsidized products without competing with private enterprise was the main stumbling block, it was said.

One subsidy plan proposes that the government sell cotton to manufacturers at less than market prices. The cotton would come from the government's 7,000,000 bales on which it has made loans to farmers. In return for the privilige of buying this cheap cotton, the manufacturer would agree to sell the finished goods at reduced prices to low-income groups.

Another plan proposes that the government let contracts to private factories using government cotton. The government in turn would give or sell the finished goods to relief and low-income families.

The committee also will consider plans for an incouraging use f cotton in the manufacture of new products such as housing insulation and road reinforcement.

Prospects Of Schools Good For 1938-1939

(By J. S. Vandiver)

We feel very much encouraged over the prospects of the schools for the schools for the session in which we are now entering. Reports from all sections of the state indicate a very fine beginning and the best prospects for a successful school session we have ever had in the history of the state.

It has been the pleasure of the members of the State Department of Education to visit many of these schools, both on the opening date and since that time, and we are all very much impressed with the fine spirit of cooperation which exists over the entire state.

There seems to be a greater interest among the patrons and tax payers than ever before which has been expressed by their visits to the schools and their willingness to support the educational program of the state.

We are very fortunate in having a very fine group of teachers who are well-trained, efficient, and who are interested not only in the welfare of the pupils but in the development of community life as well.

The tax payer has the right to expect the educational program to give to both the students and the community opoprtunity for individual and social development. This can be accomplished only through the cooperative effort of teachers, patrons, trustees, and other school officials. As a result of this kind of cooperation, we feel that the school in each community of the state is a vital factor in the development of citizenship and the right type of community interest.

LIBRARY BOOKS AS GIFTS FOR CHINA SOUGHT

CHICAGO—A plea for replenishment of the losses of Chinese libraries rfom Japanese bombings has been broadcast by the American Library Association.

In its monthly bulletin the association prints an appeal from Dr. T. L. Yuan, chairman of the executive board of the Yibrary Association of China.

Yuan writes:

"According to a recent survey over 35 national and private universities in China as well as a large number of cultural institutions have been either destroyed or disorganized in the course of Japanese armed invasion."

Yuan describes the "deplorable loss of libraries of Nankai university; Hopei Normal College, Institute of Technology, and School of Commerce and Law; the Great China University; the National Tung Chi University and Kwang Hwa University," largest institutions of higher learning in China.

He writes in detail of the destruction by bombing, pillage and fire of many of the larger libraies, and of those damaged as well as the loss of a number of the which would find use in the hands of Chinese scholars, to ship such material, prepaid, to the International Exchange Service, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D C.

Secretary of Labor Perkins "Most Leftish Member of Roosevelt Cabinet"

New York, Sept. 28—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is characterized as "the most leftish member of the Roosevelt Cabinet" in the current Liberty magazine and accused of something delegating her power to John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O.

In the first of a series of articles about the first woman Cabinet member, Walter Karig, Washington commentator, tells of an instance when Madam Perkins asked John L. Lewis' advice before making a decision concerning the Navy.

"A high ranking naval officer went to Miss Perkins," Karig relates, "when the new battleship program was authorized, to obtain her very essential cooperation. The Walsh-Healey Act requires firms working on government contracts involving $10,000 or more to abide by regulations of hours and wages dictated by the Secretary of Labor. The naval officer asked Madam Secretary to be reasonable in fixing the labor standards for the industry upon which the government had to depend for its augmented fleet.

"Miss Perkins listened, made notes, reached for a telephone. The Naval Officer nearly disgraced his uniform by fainting when the Secretary of Labor put in a call for John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chief, and asked his advice on the Navy's request.

Karig calls this a "curious state of affairs which requires the Navy to ask the Secretary of Labor to ask the head of an outlaw labor movement, which is also up to the eyebrows in politics, if the United States may build its fleet according to program."

U. S. Marine News

New Orleans, La., Sept. 27—According to announcement of Colonel F. E. Evans, U. S. M. C. the officer in charge of Marine Corps recruiting activities in the Southern Division, located at New Orleans, the Marines are planning a recruiting visit to Greenwood on October 5.

Sergeant Victor J. Bartosnek in the recruiting officer assigned to this duty of contacting and interviewing young men interested in military service with the Marine Corps. He will set up a temporary office in the Post Office building and will be glad to give any information about service in the Marine Corps to young men of Greenwood and vicinity. Sergeant Bartosnek has seen considerable service with the Marines and varied duties on domestic, sea, and foreign stations has made him well qualified to give a true picture of their military organization to aspiring "Leathernecks."

The Marine Corps is being called upon to furnish ship's detachment of Marines to new battle cruisers and aircraft carriers being commissioned this fall and the recruiting service has been given the task of securing suitable young men for this duty. Sea service with the fleet is one of the most colorful and interesting of the varied duties Marines perform and men assigned to these new ships will be afforded numerous opportunities for travel.

WORLD WAR GENERAL DIES

BUCHAREST — Marshal Alexander Averescu, 79, three times Premier of Roumania, participant in three wars, and Commander in Chief of the Roumania army during the World War, died last night.

In 1917 he suppressed a Peasant uprising when nearly 10,000 persons were killed.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

NEW YORK — Church membership reached a total of 63,848,094 in 1937, 59.9 per cent of the population over 13 years old, the religious periodical, The Christian Herald, reported today.

This represented a gain of 764,138 over the previous year. The Herald said church membership had been steadily increasing since 1880 and that last year's total represented a new high mark both in total and in percent of the population as a whole.

The Roman Catholic Church was the largest with a membership of 15,492,016. The Baptist were the largest of the Protestant denominations with a membership of 10,332 005, and the Methodist were second with 9,109,359.

YOUNG MUSSOLINI MARRIES

ROME — The engagement of Bruno Mussolini, one of the sons of Premier Benito Mussolini was announced today. He will marry Gini Ruberti, 22, daughter of the President of the Court of Appeal. The wedding has been fixed for October 29, the date of celebrations marking the beginning of the 17th year of the Facist dictatorship.

100 ARABS KILLED

JERUSALEM — More than 100 Arabs were killed in Palestine in clashes with British troops over the week-end, authorities estimated today.

Widespread disorders were reported and the troops had encounters in many sections.

Nineteen Jews were killed and three wounded in an Arab attack on Kiryat Shumuel, a Jewish settlement near Tiberias, according to dispatches.

Ten Arabs were killed and four wounded by an exploding land nine at Jaffa.

BOMBING PLANES DROP BREAD

BARCELONA—A "bread bombardment" of Madrid by nationalist airplanes was demounced today throughout Loyalist Spain.

Nationalist headquarters at Burgos reported that 30 bombing planes had dropped 47 tons of white bread, consisting of 178,000 small loaves, in parachutes and sacks, during a series of flights yesterday between non oand 6 p. m. The occasion was the celebration of "Franco Day" and also, officials said, "to aid our brethren captives in Soviet Madrid and let them know about the white bread Generalissimo Francisco Franco's soldiers are bringing as soon as they enter the streets of Madrid."

Nationalist fliers said that they were subjected to fierce anti-aircraft fire when they first crossed the city with the bread, and that the fire increased during later flights, while their bread was falling all over the district between the telephone building and the suburg of Vallegse.

BRITAIN CURBS "CON" MEN

LONDON—Confidence men are having a lean time in Great Britain. The annual report of Sih Philip Game, commissioner of police, shows that the total loss to their get-rich-quick methods was only $5,195 last year, as compared with $63,720 in 1936.

WAS LOVED GREATLY BY HIS VICTIMS

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Authorities were horrified today by a new developement in the "murder farm" case which has been horrifying this community for a week. They had found a witness who said Joe Ball dissected the bodies of his victims and fed them to his pet all gators.

No one knew the number of Ball's victims and the body of onll one had been found. They were all women--mostly hostesses Ball engaged for his roadhouse 15 miles south of here--who have been disappearing periodically during the the past six years.

The authorities maintained the anonymity of their witness who was afraid of "Joe Ball's friends." He said that on May 24, 1932, he had called on Ball and surprised him dragging the of a woman toward the concrete pit where Ball kept his five pets ranging in length from four to eight feet.

When Ball threatened to kill him, his wife, and his children if he did not keep his mouth shut and leave the state at once he obeyed. word reached him a few days ago that Joe Ball was dead, he continued, and he returned.

There was no way of ascertaining the truth of his story nor, if it were true how many bodies had been chopped up by the sociable inn keeper who boasted to friends that his one weakness was for women. He had three wives in all, one of whom was missing, and there was evidence that he had had affairs with many women. At least four women who had worked for him had been reported missing.

Neighbors had remarked on the strange disippearance of Joe Ball's second wife, Nell, and taking his third wife soon after. These whispers became public scandal, and two weeks ago authorities questioned Joe Ball.

He told a plausible story, and though he had been known as a bootlegger during prohibition he belonged to a respected family and it was accepted. But after leaving him, the sheriff's deputys decided there were several points he didn't make clear. Returning, they discovered Ball had shot himself through the heart.

That was a week ago Saturday. The investigation was intensified. Clifford Wheeler Ball's negro handyman, questioned, confessed that he had helped Ball bury parts of the body of Hazel Brown, a hostess who had disappeared two weeks before.. He had watched Ball kill her with a hatchett and dissect her body. Following his direction, authorities found the pieces.

Wheeler recalled that two years ago he had helped Ball bury the parts of Minnie May Gotthardt who had been one of his lovers. The burial occured in the sand dunes near here. Wheeler could not locate the grave. He has been charged with being an accessory after the fact of murder.

In Ball's effects, authorities found many love letters indicating that he was accustomed to dealing in lavish sentiment and including his victims.

Ball was singularly fond of his aligators and spent many hours watching them in solitary meditation. He had kept them for years, and before repeal which enabled him to sell liquor under lichen, many persons went to his place to see them, lingering to buy corn whiskey.

Authorities turned them over to the San Antonio zoo.

Alaskan Road At Standstill Due To Canada

Ottawa Seems Reluctant To Set Aside Fund Of 12 Million

SEATTLE—Financial problems and Canada's apparent lack of interest in the International Highway to Alaska today remain as outstanding barriers between America and its last frontier.

Despite these two obstacles, proponents of the "most progressive project of a century," are confident actual construction on the remaining 1,183-mile stretch between Seattle and Fairbanks will be started in 1939.

With the Dominin's position made precarious in view of Great Britain's stand in the international situation, government officials at Ottawa are reluctant to appropriate $12,000,000 as Canada's share of the British Columbia-Yukon Territory section of the graveled artery.

Cost Small To U. S.

Estimates show that the remaining 183 miles of new road to be built by the United States would cost less than $2,000,000.

Progress toward realization of the roadway has also been held up by Canada's delay in naming a committee to work in harmony with America's five-man commission appointed by President Roosevelt.

The five-man commission, headed by Rep. Warren G. Magnuson, has been active in studying proposed routes, figuring costs, and obtaining indorsement by veterans organizations, chambers of commerce, service and automobile clubs in the United States and Canada.

At a recent conference between the American commissioners and Premier T. D. Pattullo of British Columbia, Pattullo assured Magnuson he would recommend to Dominion officials that a survey of feasible routes through the province be made as soon as possible.

To Follow Rivers

Latest plans call for a 20 or 22-foot highway, with a correspondingly wider roadbed to run through river routes from Fairbanks along the Tenana river to Dawson, thence to Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, Atlin, Hazelton, and Prince George. At Kamloops, the highway would split, one artery running to Vancouver and Seattle and the other through Spokane and the Inland Empire.

The route would extend east of the coastal mountain range, where there is considerable sunshine the year around and a minimum amount of rainfall and fog.

The United States, basically interested in the highway from a Pacific Coast defense standpoint, in recent months has sent numerous cabinet officials and members of congress on survey junkets over the route.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Assistant Secretaries of War Louis Johnson and J. Monroe Johnson have sanctioned construction of the roadway as soon as possible.

Coast Defense Improved

Pacific Coast defense, both in the United Sttaes and Alaska, are being "rejuvinated," according to the assistant secretary of war, and the highway would permit rapid transportation of arms and ammunition to the northern frontier within a period of hours.

Alaska now has less than 1,600 miles of road. Championing construction, proponents contend the highway would connect with, or intersect, all existing and contemplated trancontinental highways in western Canada. It would also interlace with America's vast highway system.

Actually of such a highway is also seen as the initial step in the building of a vast, Pacific-international highway to extend from Alaska to South America, thus further promoting international good will and trade relations.

FAIR FARM SHOW WILL MIRROR RURAL PROGRESS

One of the state's greatest agricultural educational institutions, the 1938 Mississippi Free State Fair will present a colorful cross-section of the state's agriculture and rural home life at its best. The number and character of agricultural exhibits and displays which will be shown at this year's fair assures visitors a farm show that will excell in variety and quality, in interest and educational value, any previous exhibition staged in the state's capitol city.

The 1938 farm show will mirror the state's farm program. It will show much of the best of what the farmers, farm women, 4-H club boys and girls, future farmers, and livestock producers are doing. It will portray new developments in the field of agriculture and home making and present practical ideas and a wealth of useful information to fair visitors.

Features of the farm show include six special county agricultural exhibits representing as many major farm enterprises, the state corn show, the Mississippi 4-H club boys' exhibit, the home demonstration displays, the 4-H club girls exhibits, the Smith-Hughes community displays and farm shop show, and the Hinds county community exhibits—all housed in the big agricultural building.

In the new agricultural building fair visitors will find educational exhibits on soils, crops, forestry, the AAA farm program, cotton and cottonseed, rural electrification, and health. These exhibits which will be installed by representatives of state and federal institutions, include the Mississippi Extension Service, Mississippi State College, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the Farm Security Administration, the State Plant Board, and the State Board of Health.

The dairy show, sponsored by the state Extension Service and the Mississippi Jersey Cattle Club, will be larger than in any recent year. It will show the state's finest dairy cattle.

The beef cattle show will be made up of individual animals carefully selected from the state's best herds to form show classes from calf groups to aged animals.

The state poultry show and judging contests will be another feature to many fair visitors.

Sunflower, Noxubee, Newton, Madison, Pearl River, and Stone counties will put on agricultural exhibits under direction of the county agents. These exhibits will cover cotton production, ginning and marketing, dairying, diversified farming, a live-at-home program, county farm planning and farm enterprises adapted to the coastal sections.

Washington Parade

Washington, D. C. Oct. 6—Unanimous and enthusiastic praise showered on Prime Minister Chamberlain last week has left in its wake a good many apologists. The terms which the British and French governments have offered Czechoslovakia and the price to avoid a Nazi assault, and that little country's courageous answer has swung the pendulum of praise from Chamberlain to President Benes.

Peace is precious. So precious in fact that it is worth even a sacrifice of principal or a compromise with honor. But, from here it seems that there must be other alternatives than a capitulation to the threat of brute force.

How much a dictator's threat is pure bluff can best be understood from Mussolini's trieste speech. The Duce came out flatly for a plebiscite. This decision, he says, is dictated by the Rome-Berlin Axis, but when he speaks of Plebiscites and Italian friendship for Poles and other nationalities one can but wonder whether the Italian Dictator, thinking of the future, is trying to help his "friend" Hitler or just wants a share of the credit for bringing about the "victory" he envisages.

It is axiomatic that labor is relativeily docile when business is declining, and turns militant at the first sign of business improvement. The present is no exception to the rule.

From any point of view the split in labor's ranks is a calamity of major proportions, which promises seriously to aggravate the normal increase in aggressiveness to be expected in the next few months, assuming that the momentum of rising business activity continues. And again it is likely that the automobile industry will be the sacrificial goat as the struggle for control of the united automobile workers unfolds. The elaborate process of railroad wage negotiations prescribed by law has reached the stage where no agreement between management and labor is possible. Thirty days must elapse before the proposed wage cut can be effected, and in the meantime, the unions are expected to take a strike vote. Then the president must appoint a fact finding commission, which must make a recommendation within thirty days. Neither side is obligated to accept its findings, but still another thirty days must elapse before any further action can be taken. Then what?

Deficit Sets New High As Conservatives Plan Economy

WASHINGTON—The New Deal administration appears today to be in the way toward a new fiscal year spending record as Congressional conservatives discuss vague and probably futile economy plans.

A bitter economy-taxation-spending battle is brewing for the 76th Congress which will be elected next month and meet the first week of January, 1939. But with three months to go before the congress meets there is but slight prospect that major cuts in expenditure will be imposed by congress on the administration.

Much more probable is that the conservative Democrats who were offended or directly affected by the 1938 primary "purge" effort will join conservative Republicans in an effort to earmark future appropriations, perhaps reduce them slightly.

One of the top senate Democrats whose influence is considerable told the United Press.

"I don't think Congress will vote the President another great sum of money to be spent by his allocation or by allocation of WPA or PWA authorities."

The idea behind that statement is that congress should reassert its authority over all federal spending. It does not necessarily signify that the federal government would spend less for relief or publi cworks. Rather, it means that there is a growing bloc in congress which would prefer to vote for such appropriations in bills which specified where, when and for what the money would be expended, right down to the last sewer project, or culvert or what not in the most remote township.

The earmarking fight will be a bruising contest in which the New Deal faithful will be on one side and anti-New Dealers of all parties on the other. It will be as revealing of coming new party alignments as any contest so far over Roosevelt policies.

The actual voting of federal economy measures will be done reluctantly, if at all, as in the case of new taxes. But even income tax increases on middle and lower income groups would carry less potential political dynamite than a cut in the source of income of the millions of persons who now are supported in whole or part by federal funds.

The economy group, however, will be loud if small and it will make use of figures which rebect a steadily increasing drain on the federal treasury and a steadily mounting national debt. The debt figure now is well over $33,000,000,000 (E). Whether it is approaching a danger point is one of the questions which will arouse congressional debate and what to do about it will be even more debatable.

Yesterday the treasury published its condition statement as of Oct. 1, the first day of the second quarter of the fiscal year. Comparing those Oct. 1 figures with figures for Oct. 1 in previous fiscal years, the general upward movement of federal spending and federal income is obvious. The statement also made it obvious that the spending pace has continued to accelerate although the trend of increased income was reversed by the depression which began in August, 1937. Here are the comparative figures.

Oct. 1, 1938, expenses $2,229,000,000, receipts $1,519,000,000, gross deficit $710,000,000.

Oct. 1, 1937 expenses $1,991,000,000, receipts $1,663,000,000, gross deficit $327,000,000.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN AMERICAN BUSINESS

New York—BUSINESS— Virtually unnoticed the last month because of a complete domination of the news by the European crisis business in America has quietly been staging a speedy upward climb from Spring's lower levels. Steel mill operations have returned 46.7 per cent of capacity, and steelmen look for a rate of 60 per cent before the end of October. Sales managers say incoming orders from wholesalers and retailers to manufacturers reflect confidence that consumer purchasing power will continue to gain. Study of Federal Reserve Board's business summary for August reported last week, indicates that for September the board's index of nation-wide industrial production rose above 90 for the first time in 11 months. Based on 1923-25 as 100, such an index figure would compare with 83 in August, 83 in July and 76 in May.

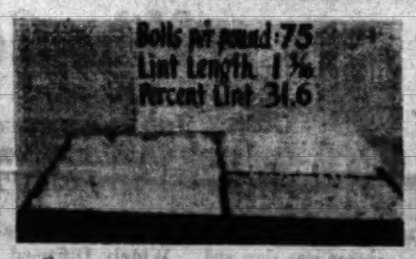
Mississippi Is Throne Room Of Southern Agricultural Monarch



King Cotton belongs to the bittersweet of that curious lore America has contributed to civilization's colorful traditions. Amazing virtues and villainies have immortalized him in the world's favorite legends.

It was his fate to be caught out of focus when History's cameraman came along at a hysterical war-torn moment in national life. Overcasting his white brow at the time were the thunderclouds of secession that shocked the nation, stirred the world, and magnified emotional absurdities.

Frozen then at the peak of his power and glory over Southern life, his image lives on today in the popular imagination as the sole guiding force of a great society's social, economic, and political thought.

In some minds he is an impersonation of the traditions of a shattered empire—the living, liquid voice of an ill-starred society that spread the wings of the most romantic ideals in the teeth of a deadly, rising gale of national materialism. Others yet know him as the personal expression of that dreamland of social elegance created against the melancholy magnificence of song and slavery.

It is true that the high tide of his social order was the nearest approach to imperial grandeur American agriculture ever experienced. But King Cotton has been greatly misunderstood. He never was cast for the role of one-crop dictatorship that was thrust upon him. It was never contemplated that he should exercise the despotic powers he long wielded over Southern affairs.

Out of the ten years of confusion that followed the War Between the States grew a haphazard condition wholly out of keeping with the original cotton scheme in Southern life. From the high order of farm diversification that had made Southern farm life more attractive than any other in the nation, there was forced upon the society of this section a one-crop practice. Through dire necessity it became the custom to concentrate upon the one crop that would find an immediate cash market for a section that had no other currency.

Yet the South could get along without him more easily than the nation as a whole could—certainly better than King Cotton could get along without the South.

Cotton is second only to corn in the nation's agricultural products, and as an export crop outranks in value any other farm commodity. The good health of King Cotton is a matter for national rather than sectional concern.

The history of Mississippi has been the story of a cotton empire's rise. And the history of cotton has had its highlights in Mississippi developments.

Prior to 1800 cotton was but one of many plants grown on Mississippi farms. Tobacco and indigo preceded it as the chief cash crops. Cotton forged to the front at the beginning of the nineteenth century, shortly after a New England Yankee named Eli Whitney startled his Georgia hosts one day by exhibiting a device with which lint and seed could be separated mechanically without the tiresome thumb-and-finger process.

But the cotton era was definitely begun for the South with the introduction of Mexican seed into the Mississippi Territory in 1806. The extraordinarily high yields and hardiness of this new variety in comparison with the older black-seed type then grown gave a tremendous impetus to the production of cotton. Most present-day upland varieties are the offspring of the parent stock first introduced into Mississippi.

Today, situated as it is in the geographic center of the cotton-growing states, Mississippi more than any other state could be regarded as King Cotton's capital—as the throne-room, so to speak, of this mighty agricultural monarch.

Extending almost across the cotton belt from north to south, Mississippi embraces the whole range of climatic conditions suitable for cotton. It has a greater diversity of factors involved in the production of the staple than any other state.

Leading all Southern states in quality and yield per acre, Mississippi's cotton industry today is a mighty factor in the country's economic life. Its farmers receive a higher price for cotton and seed than farmers of any other states in the Southern cotton belt. Bolivar is the leading cotton-producing county in the nation. Three-fourths of the country's long staple crop is produced in Mississippi. The state holds the world-wide, all-time record for cotton production—10 bales of long staple cotton raised on three acres.

The world's largest cotton plantation is that of the Delta and Pine Land Company—35,000 acres covering 50 square miles around Scott, Mississippi, in the Mississippi Delta.

Of the 1927-1936 average production of cotton in the United States, 13,101,900 bales, Mississippi produced an average of 1,462,100 bales, ranking second in the total production by states and accounting for approximately 10 per cent of the total production for the entire country.

The $117,150,000 paid Mississippi farmers for cotton and cottonseed in 1937 was more than was received by cotton farmers of any other state except Texas.

Mississippi State College put forth the first public experimental efforts toward cotton improvement in the nation's history. The Delta Branch Experiment Station at Stoneville is the only station in the world with its own experiment cotton gin. The personnel there has grown from one technical authority and a dozen laborers in 1904 to 50 technical and semi-technical workers and 100 laborers today.

Cotton's importance to Mississippi's present and future welfare is strongly reflected in figures measuring the moving tides of the industry. Mississippi is more dependent upon cotton than any other state. While 40 per cent of all agricultural income in the South comes from cotton, this commodity brings in 90.12 per cent of Mississippi's cash crop income.

Mississippi has a larger percentage of its total farm area planted in cotton than any other state—45.79 per cent, as compared with 27.3 per cent for the Southern states as a whole.

Of Mississippi's 7,464,000 cultivated acres, 3,418,000 were planted to cotton last year.

There are now about 40 cotton mills and garment factories in Mississippi. In 1935 the state's textile industry paid 2,683 employees $1,408,000. The growth of these cotton-using mills has been slow but steady since the turn of the century. In 1900 the value of cotton manufactures in the state was $1,473,000. In 1910 the output was valued at $3,102,000, in 1933 it amounted to $4,575,000, and in 1935 to $5,596,000.

The average person thinks of cotton only as regarding the lint manufactured into cloth. But there is a wealth of cotton by-products offering a rich field for present and future development. Wrapped in the lint are seed that formerly were regarded as useless except in planting another crop. Day by day new evidence comes that these seed are storehouses of vast potential wealth to be made available through chemurgic industries.

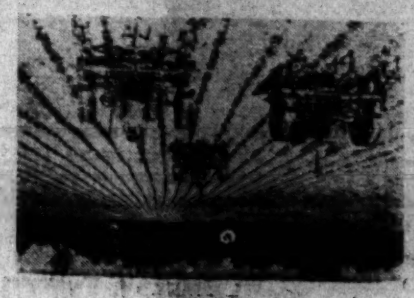
From them comes cottonseed oil which reaches the American kitchen in the form of refined cooking oils and shortening, and appears on the dining tables as salad oil and margarine. Livestock over the country consume vast quantities of cottonseed meal and hulls. Hundreds of articles of commerce are manufactured from linters.

Mississippi's cottonseed production in 1936 was valued at $34,815,000, of which $15,225,000 was represented in the output of cottonseed oil. There are approximately 50 cottonseed oil mills and fertilizer plants in the state.

There is no question that King Cotton has been an ailing old man during recent years. Production troubles have been bad enough, but over production has been worse. Mississippians have led in efforts to adjust production to demand.

But in the more permanently practical field of developing greater markets, the state has been particularly outstanding. Mississippi is leading the way in the formation of a National Cotton Council, an organization of earnest men on whom King Cotton may lean with increasing confidence as the coming decade unfolds. Fully capable of incomparable yields, Mississippi needs only adequate markets to restore King Cotton to more than legendary splendor.

This is the sixth of a series of semi-monthly presentations of the Mississippi Advertising Commission. The seventh will feature winter cover crops.



Cotton cultivation (left), harvesting (center), and shipping (right) are the watershed down which Mississippi's greatest streams of agricultural energy run. The state's new million dollar pier at Gulfport is making of that harbor a growing cotton shipping center.

Troop 7 of Clarksdale, Troop 9 of Duncan, Troop 25 of Shelby, Troop 27 of Sumner, Troop 36 of Silver City and Troop 41 of Indianola earned first place streamers in the Delta Boy Scout Council Summer Achievement program which closed August 31st.

This activity according to Council Commissioner Dr. H. C. Green, of Clarksdale, involved a full program of summer activities on the part of the troops, including regular weekly troops meetings, the holding of at least one outdoor activity or special event each month, fifty percent or more of the troop membership in attendance at Camp Tallaha for a week; 30% of troop membership to advance in rank during the three month period of the program and the recruitment of two or more new boys.

Troops earning 6200 to 7700 points were awarded a first place streamer, 4700 to 6200 points a second place streamer and 3200 to 4700 a third place streamer.

Troop 3 of Charleston and Troop 34 of Lambert earned the second place streamer and Troop 39 of Winona a third place streamer.

More than forty percent of the troops of the Council participated in the program according to Dr. Green and we wish to give special mention to the unusually effective program conducted by Troop 9 of Duncan during the months of June, July and August.

Flattery Wins Freedom For Desperadoes

LEXINGTON, N. C. (UP)—Lula Belle, jailers daughter who fell in love with a handsome felon, cried her heart out in jail today, vowing that her first experience with men would be her last one.

Her father locked her up himself and then, in "deep humiliation," resigned his job. Lula Bell, in charge of the jail while he was away, had freed her boy friend and another felon who repaid her faith in them by murdering one man, kidnaping another, and pulling a string of holdups.

Today, a posse was deployed around a woods near here where they believed James Godwin, 19, and Bill Wilson, 21 were hiding. If and when caught they will join Lula Bell in jail, on a charge of mirder Lula Bell was charged with "aiding and abetting" their escape.

Lula Bell is 22 years old, weighs 175 pounds, and is so husky that her father, proud of her before love made water of her muscles, boasted tha. she handled "women prisoners like sacks of potatoes." Her powerful physique did not encourage suitors and she had never experienced masculine influence until a month ago when Godwin, Wilson, and Wilson's brother were locked up on charges of banditry.

Lula Belle, her father's "handy-man" about the jail, carried their food to their cells, brought in their lawyers, and generally attended to their needs. Godwin immediately began calling "beautiful," praising her attire admiring her voice and her femininity. No one had ever called Lula Belle beautiful before. She had no resistance at all and it wasn't long before she was taking a lively interest in his future and well being.

Jailer T. C. Kimel thought Lula Belle merely was exhibiting inate kindness of heart when he noticed her carrying cigarettes and candy back to Godwin. These excursions provided opportunity for Godwin to pour out the story of his life, to tell amid tears, how he had been misunderstood and persecuted and forced by circumstance into the ways of felon.

"If I could only get out, I'd go to church every Sunday and be a good man," he said. "but I'll never get out. They're going to kill me in the lethal chamber.

Lula Belle couldn't bear the thought of "such a nice young man" dying in the lethal chamber, North Carolina's method of executing condemned felons. She knew that the law provided the death penalty for bandits but she didn't know it was rarely if never invoked and soon she was suffering acutely from the ever-present thought of "Jimmy's" eminent and certain execution.

Monday afternoon her father left her in charge of the jail and Godwin pulled out all the stops.

"He promised he would go to church and would behave and I believed him," Lula Belle said. "I wish I hadn't let him out. I didn't think what embarrassment I would cause the sheriff and my family. I just didn't think.

Island Chosen For Hurricane Lookout Post

Dot In Caribbean Held Strategically Located For Warnings

NEW ORLEANS—The U. S. weother bureau has re-established an observation post on Swan Island—a mere speck of earth in the spawning grounds of the howling tropical hurricanes.

W. F. McDonald, chief of the New Orleans bureau, regards the post as the most important in the far-flung web of the hurricane warning system.

The Island is strategically located in the Caribbean with reference to shipping routes through Yucatan Channel and southward to major banana ports.

And, McDonald pointed ou ships often scurry from the area on reports of a severe disturbance and leave the weather bureau without a guide to the storm's early progress. The new post will plub an important gap in the chain of observers who warn the world of a storm's vagaries from the time it rears out into the ocean until it dies, sometimes thousands of miles away.

Ship Data Important

Ships often supplement the bureau's reports by messages radioed direct from the storm belt. McDonald said that ships have aided in hurricane forecasts since the earliest use of marine radio.

With ship reports the weather bureau's system for beating the hurricane by outfiguring it is now virtually complete. The Swan Island post has been sed twice this year to chart the courses of two major hurricanes.

The weather bureau used the island from 1914 to 1927 when Tropical Radio, a subsidiary of United Fruit compan, maintained a radio relay to transmit messages from New Orleans to points on the lower Atlantic. The relay was abandoned when it became possible to radio direct.

Navy Praises Site

Navy officials, who supplied radio equipment and operators for the remote post, commented:

"If it were possible to move an island around at will and place it where it would do the most good, a better spot for observing hurricanes could not have been found."

Embassy clerks reported that both Honduras and Great Britain might challenge the United States' right to use Swan Island.

Honduras claims the island by right of early Spanish discovery in the 16th century.

AUSTRALIA SUGAR COATED

CANBERRA (UP)—Australians like it sugar coated. Official statistics just released show that whereas world consumption of sugar averages less than 50 pounds annually for each person, the average Australian consumes 123.9 pounds. New Zealand has the next highest consumption with Great Britain third.

TAX TOKENS HOARDED

EL RENO, Oklahoma (UP)—The state puts out sales tax tokens by the thousands here but redeems them only by the hundreds. "We have come to the conclusion" says Miss Daisy Braden, El Reno tag agent, "that someone either is hoarding the little one and five mill pieces or burying them in wholesale lots."

AFL HITS AT RFC

HOUSTON, Texas—The resolutions Committee of the American Federation of Labor today discussed a sharply worded demand that President Roosevelt dismiss high officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The proposed resolution charged RFC officers with "financing chiseling exploiters of labor." Jesse H. Jones, the tall, grey-haired industrialist who is Houston's No. 1 citizen, is chairman of the agency.

His name originally was used in the resolution, it was learned, but was eliminated under pressure at the last moment. The proposal was offered by James M. Duffy, head of the International Brotherhood of Operative Potters, to be submitted to delegates attending the A. F. of L. convention here.

SALUTATORY

Tre writer feels deeply the responsibility of the publication of THE SENTINEL—a journal with an eighty-six year record for service to this community.

The lives of its Publishers—whose footsteps have gone before, leaving their impressions in the well-preserved files—are an example which your humble servant will wish to emulate.

Its most recent editor—Rice Lawrence—who maintained the traditions of the publication, has seen fit to place the responsibility on these shoulders making necessary this salutation which is made under laborous conditions.

The new management will feel a deep interest at all times, not only in all matters pertaining to the growth and development of The Sentinel, in its field of service, but will always feel a keen interest in the retiring editor and wish him every possible success in whatsoever he may choose for his livelihood.

This week—while efforts were being made to consolidate plants and mechanical forces—all operations have been severely handicapped.

When all plant consolidations have been completed and those producing the paper find a basis for colaboration, it is not vane to state that it should be possible to give the public a better paper than they have ever had due to the increased facilities. It will, however, take another fourteen days to get all equipment moved into one building and get mechanical installations, and adjustments completed.

At present The Sentinel and The Daily Star are being published from the same location, on Main Street, and they will continue from the same location.

It is planned to use as serviceably as possible the large commercial printing plant of The Sentinel to serve its well established clientele.

Secretary of Labor Perkins "Most Leftish Member of Roosevelt Cabinet"

New York, Sept. 28—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is characterized as "the most leftish member of the Roosevelt Cabinet" in the current Liberty magazine and accused of something delegating her power to John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O.

In the first of a series of articles about the first woman Cabinet member, Walter Karig, Washington commentator, tells of an instance when Madam Perkins asked John L. Lewis' advice before making a decision concerning the Navy.

"A high ranking naval officer went to Miss Perkins," Karig relates, "when the new battleship program was authorized, to obtain her very essential cooperation. The Walsh-Healey Act requires firms working on government contracts involving $10,000 or more to abide by regulations of hours and wages dictated by the Secretary of Labor. The naval officer asked Madam Secretary to be reasonable in fixing the labor standards for the industry upon which the government had to depend for its augmented fleet.

"Miss Perkins listened, made notes, reached for a telephone. The Naval Officer nearly disgraced his uniform by fainting when the Secretary of Labor put in a call for John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chief, and asked his advice on the Navy's request.

Karig calls this a "curious state of affairs which requires the Navy to ask the Secretary of Labor to ask the head of an outlaw labor movement, which is also up to the eyebrows in politics, if the United States may build its fleet according to program."

Others who were present were Mrs. C. E. Heath and daughter, Miss Belma Heath, Mrs. B. M. Townsend and daughter, Miss Marie Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Heath and children, Mary Ann, Robert Lee and Newton Earl, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. DeLoach and sons, Frank William and Doyle Clayton, all of Carrollton, Mrs. L. W. Heath and children, Douglas and Lorraine, Mr. Jim Laster and daughter, Miss Jennie Lynn, of Grenada, Mrs. John McCorkle, Vaiden, Mr. Houston Heath, Shaw, Miss., Mr. Lee T. Heath, Forrest City, Ark.

A beautiful dinner with plenty of cold drinks was enjoyed by all. An interesting feature of the day was the numerous pictures taken of the different families and groups of the brothers. The only thing to mar the happiness of the brothers was the illness and absence of their sister, Mrs. Watt Harper, Forrest City, Ark.

Heath Reunion

On Wednesday, September 7, 1938, three generations were represented at the reunion of the late John R. Heath family. At the old family home eight miles southwest of Grenada.

This place was settled in 1860 by Mr. and Mrs. John R. Heath, and is still owned by their five sons, the youngest being 68 years of age. This day was celebrated in honor of one brother, John Will Heath, of Whitney, Texas.

The reunion brought together the five brothers for the first time in 32 years. They are Henry A. Heath, Vaiden, Miss.; John Will Heath, Whitney, Texas; Andrew M. Heath, Forrest City, Ark.; Charles E. Heath, Carrollton, Miss.; Lyon W. Heath, Grenada, Miss.

P. T. A. PUTS ON DRIVE FOR MEMBERSHIP

Each year the P. T. A. in order to increase membership, sponsors a contest among the various grades of both Grammar School and High School. The class that is represented by the most members is rewarded with a prize of $2.50 in cash. This money is needed in the treasury of each class, and especially so in that of the Seniors. Each class is now working hard to secure members to represent them at the meeting Wednesday afternoon. Won't you parents, relatives and friends come and stand up for your favorite class? Your presence is needed and wanted at the meeting, so pay up your dues and come out to help win the prize.

SENIORS VOTE FOR SPEAKING SYSTEM

At a class meeting held on Tuesday, the Seniors unanimously agreed to combine their class funds with those of last year's class, and set up a speaking system in the High School. Mr. Lancaster, a representative of the company, International Business Machine Corporation, visited the Seniors Friday and explained the system to them. This system will be a great asset to the school. It will save a great many steps, the wear and tear on the stairs, and will also be a b'g step toward modernizing the school.. The class of '38 voted to leave their funds to help install this system, and this year's class is also very enthuiastic about the plan.

SENIORS SELECT RINGS AND INVITATIONS

Although it may seem a bit early, the Seniors have already selected their class rings, and have sent off the order. Now, they are impatiently awaiting the arrival of the jewelry, which is expected to be sometime in November. They have also chosen their invitations. This Senior class is no slow, lazy class; it is ahead of everybody else.

PUPILS HAVE DENTAL EXAMINATION

On Thursday the students of both Grammar School and High School were favored with a visit from Dr. Bailey, who examined their teeth. There was a 100% examination, and there was a high percentage of those who had O. K. teeth. This is indeed a great aid and promotion to the health of the children, as those whose teeth need attention know about it, and can then have the necessary work done. Bad teeth, besides being the cause of a good many diseases, promote poor health; so if your child's teeth need repairing, attention should be given them right away.

DRAMATIC CLUB MEETS

On Thursday, September 27, the Dramatic Club was organized with officers named as follows: President, Nina Mae Clark; Vice-President, Sue Collins; Secretary-Treasurer, Nadine Moss; Social Chairman, Jennie Lee Davis; Reporter, Charles Kenright; Program Chairman, Mary Evelyn Colvin; Program Committee, Kathryn McCormick, Thomas Houston, Kathleen Nail; and Sponsor, Miss Lucille Pierce.

The club expects a successful year with a large number of members. They expect to put on a number of plays in the club, in chapel, and before other organizations.

BULLDOGS DEFEAT SENATOBIA 27 TO 0

Last Friday afternoon the Grenada High School Bulldogs in their second game of the season, defeated the Senatobia High football team 27 to 0.

Grenada, with their goal line never in danger, scored in the first few minutes of play and again in the second quarter held scoreless the third quarter. Coach Hathorn put in almost an entire new team and the Bulldogs pushed over two more touch downs before the final gun.

All the boys on the Grenada team played a good game. Edgs. Brunsen and Gus Hodges repeatedly got away for nice gains and Paul Lockett, Robert Murphy and Captain Dale Harper stopped many a Senatobia play before the visitors knew what had happened.

The next game Grenada will play here will be with Houston, October 21. This game will be played on the newly acquired lighted field at the Fair Grounds. Come on out and see the game.

CHAPEL PROGRAM

Last Wednesday the school assembled for the third chapel program. Miss Black led the group in singing three songs. Mr. Rundle read the second chapter of the first Timothy. The theme of his talk was, "There is no degree in honesty."

Czechs Court Germany Now

PRAGUE—The new cabinet of Premier General Jan Syrony took over the conduct of government today.

Its immediate task was to consolidate what was left of the country after the cessions of territory to Germany and Poland, and to deal with Hungary which also demanded territory.

It was a smaller but stronger government than the former one. The number of cabinet members had been reduced from 18 to 14. The Slovakian minority got four cabinet officers; the Ruthenians one. They are the only sizable minorities left except the Magyars who are expected to be returned to Hungary.

As a symbol of its strength, the cabinet included three generals. It was reliably reported and suggested by newspapers that the government would shape it foreign policy after Germany's on the theory that since Czeshoslovakia had been deserted by it allies—Great Britain and France—in its minorities crisis, and since Germany would be able to exert far greater economic pressure on the country by acquisition of the Sudeten area, the only course was to get along with Germany.

PREDICTS SALE OF POWER COMPANY

JACWSON, Tennessee — John Wisdom, President of West Tennessee Power & Light Company, predicted today that sale of Memphis Power & Light Company to Memphis for distribution of TVA power would pave the way for sale of the utility which he bears to Jackson for the same purpose.

Wisdom announced that officials of the Tennessee Valley Authority would be invited to attend necotiations now in progress as was done at Memphis.

He said he believed the sale of M. P. & L. would have a "pronounced effect" on his concern's interests in other West Tennessee cities.

The whole background of negotiations in Memphis," Wisdom said, "is similar to the situation here."

LONDON—The News Chronicle, in a dispatch from Prague, reported that numerous officers and men of the Czechoslovakia army had committed suicide as the result of the country's dismemberment.

The suicides occurred in southern Czechoslovakia, the dispatch said, where four officers shot themselves in one day at one town.

The dispatch reported also that Czechs were turning back numerous refuges who arrived in the Prague area, in order to avoid acquiring another German democratic minority.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

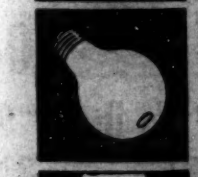
No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Outworn Ideas EXPLODED

1. THE IDEA THAT SEEING IS INSTANTANEOUS. Actually, it takes time to see just as it takes time for a camera to take a picture. The eye is like a camera, and the dimmer the light, the longer the "exposure" necessary to catch all the details. Increase the light, and you can read, sew or work more quickly and with less effort.

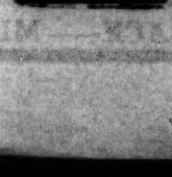
2. THAT HEADLIGHTS ARE TOO BRIGHT. The reason headlights cause eyestrain at night is not brightness, but contrast between light and darkness. In bright sunshine, headlights are scarcely noticeable.



3. THAT FINE PRINT IS ALWAYS HARD ON THE EYES. Fine print is usually hard on the eyes because people don't have enough light for easy seeing. If you sit by a window you can read for hours without noticeable eyestrain. At night, use at least one 100-watt lamp.

4. THAT A 60-WATT BULB GIVES GOOD LIGHT FOR READING. Sixty watts used to be considered excellent reading light, but recent tests show that, except for largest size type, one 100-watt lamp is the least the average person can read by without risking eyestrain.

5. THAT EYES ALONE ARE AFFECTED BY POOR LIGHT. Experiments by leading scientists prove that reading in poor light not only affects eyes, but wastes valuable nervous energy.



6. THAT GOOD LIGHT IS EXPENSIVE. With modern efficient I.E.S. Better Sight Lamps, good light often costs less than poor light from antiquated lamps that waste light. Let us show you how inexpensive good light really is in your own home.

Winter Legumes In Spectacular Gains On Farms of State

Significantly Increased Yields of Succeeding Crops Cited as Reason for Annually Increased Plantings.

October in other areas may be an attractive period when the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock", but in Mississippi October has the dual meaning of harvest time and time for planting vetch and Austrian peas for a bumper crop of cotton or corn next year.

Really remarkable progress has been made in Mississippi in annually increased planting of winter legumes for turning under during the early spring months to fertilize succeeding commercial crops. Within ten years the number of pounds of seed planted has increased from approximately 100,000 to more than 15 million pounds during the current season.

This phenominal increase in the planting of winter legumes, studied in conjunction with a less substantial increase in summer legumes, is taken to indicate a definite trend in solving the problem of soil fertility. Not so many years ago it was felt that winter legumes were somewhat uncertain because of severe winters, and summer legumes, such as soybeans and cowpeas, were stressed. The summer legumes, however, were often harvested for hay or grain and much of the soil enriching facility was taken from the land. The winter legumes are turned under in time for another crop so that the succeeding crops get all of the fertility. Under this procedure farmers in all portions of Mississippi who plant and turn under winter legumes have seen their crops increased by 50 per cent the first year and doubled within just a few years.

Still more recently there has come another development. Phosphate fertilizer and lime are applied at the time of planting winter legumes, and this practice has the double facility of greatly increasing the nitrogen bearing green material to be turned under during the spring and of supplying these essential minerals to the growing crops to follow.

"Experience thus far is conclusive," stated J. C. Holton, commissioner of agriculture, "that farmers no longer have to move to another county or to another state to have rich land. By protecting their present lands from erosion and by consistently planting and turning under winter legumes, bale-to-the-acre land can be developed in every county and on almost every farm in Mississippi. October is the time for planting vetch and peas."

THREE MILLION FOREST TREE SEEDLINGS READY

State College, Miss., Oct. 6—Three million forest trees seedlings will be available to Mississippi farmers begining December 1 for reforestation, erosion control work and for planting for birds and otehr wildlife, according to Brooks Toler, forester for the Mississippi Extension Service.

These seedlings, said Toler, will be distributed to farmers at a small cost, plus express charges from the nursery. Farmers desiring tree seedlings can place their orders through county agricultural agents or vocational teachers.

From present indications, the forester said, demands for the tree seedlings will be greater this year than in previous years. A great number of farmers in the state are using tree planting as one of the soil building practices under the Agricultural Conservation payment. This practice allows a credit of five units for each acre of trees planted on attaining the soil building allowance set up for the farm. Farmers who have not attained their soil building allowances are making preparations for tree planting previous to January 1, so that they may qualify for their entire allowance.

Farmers planting trees are utilizing lands unsuited to crop and pasture production, and at the same time are growing material for home use for the control of erosion and for commercial purposes.

Shipment of trees will begin around December 1 and farmers are being urged to place their orders at once so that they will be assured of trees.

"Milk Facts"

State College, Miss., Oct. 6—Mississippi's growing importance in the dairy industry is strikingly illustrated in the new "Milk Facts" booklet issued by the Milk Industry Foundation of New York. "Milk Facts" show that Mississippi dairy cows produced $12,110,000 cash farm income from milk in 1937.

Charts show that the United States is one of the ranking nations in the consumption of dairy products. With per capita consumption of fluid milk at 153 quarts a year, America tops all other countries except Switzerland with 232 quarts.

Annual per capita milk consumption in quarts for other nations is: Denmark, 144; Czechoslovakia, 136; Netherlands, 120; New Zealand, 112; Great Britain, France and Germany, 92; Australia, 88; Belgium, 68 and Italy, 28.

"Milk, in one form or another, comprises over 25 percent of the 1,500-odd pounds of food used each year by the average American," says the booket. "It requires about 10½ quarts of milk to make a pound of butter and 4½ quarts to make a pound of cheese. Approximately 250 billion new milk bottles are purchased annually."

The booklet contains pictorial charts and figures showing the importance of the milk industry to the country's economic picture. Diagramatic charts illustrate how the United States utilizes its milk supply of some 48,777,000,000 quarts of milk a year.

Fluid or fresh milk, which provides the farmer's highest cash return, accounts for 79.2 percent of the country's yearly production. Creamery butter, 10.5 percent, while 12.1 percent of the milk is used on farms where produced. In making cheese 5.9 percent of the total milk is used; ice cream, 2.3 percent and canned milks, 4.3 percent, according to charts.

Another chart shows a breakdown of the distributor's milk dollar based on recent certified accountants' figures prepared for the New York legislature. This shows that 44.03 percent of the dollar goes to dairy farmers for milk; 28.16 percent to labor; 8.75 percent for supplies—bottles, cases, trucking, etc.; taxes, 2.24 percent; depreciation, 2.40 percent; profits, 2.08 percent; salaries, less than ½ of 1 percent.

"Within less than fifty years," says the booklet, "the production and utilization of milk have so increased in this country that today we are the greatest of dairy nations.

"Milk is our most widely used food, the farmer's largest source of cash income and the basis of an industry which for service and volume has few equals.

"Basic data about the nation's milk supply, the producers and the cows which create the supply, the distributors whose safeguards and efficiency have made wide usage possible and the consumers of this 'most nearly perfect food' are of wide interest.

"Around 25 million cows are milked daily on three quarters of the nation's six million farms—more than 45 million quarts of milk are delivered to homes and stores. Milk, cheese, butter, ice cream and other dairy products create an estimated annual output of 3½ billion dollars.

"The statistical background for this vast industry of wide ramifications should lead to a clearer understanding of milk economics."

CAPITAL CITY INVITES FAIR VISITORS

JACKSON, OCTOBER 10-15

★ "Welcome to Jackson" is the message of Mayor Walter A. Scott and City Commissioners A. F. Hawkins and R. M. Taylor as they pose with a Mississippi Free State Fair parade float in front of the historic city hall. That's Mayor Scott in the center with Mr. Taylor on the left and Mr. Hawkins on the right. The Capitol City is preparing to entertain the greatest crowds in her history during the coming Free State Fair to be held during the week of October 10-15.

F. F. Hill Appointed Governor of F. C. A

F. F. Hill was today appointed Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, succeeding W. I. Myers, recently named head of the Department of Agricultural Economics at Cornell University. Hill has worked continuously at the Farm Credit Administration since it was organized in 1933, and has been Deputy Governor since 1934.

Although still only 37 years old Hill is widely known for his work in agricultural economics and farm planning. His experience was drawn upon heavily by the Farm Credit Administration in perfecting the "normal value" appraisal policy which enabled the Federal land banks and Commissioner to refinance over two billion dollars of farm mortgage debts following the breakdown of agricultural credit in 1932-33.

Born on a farm near Kingman, Kansas, not far from the heart of the winter wheat belt, Hill lived there until he was 12 years old when his family moved to a 1500-acre farm near Davidson, Saskatchewan. At that time American farmers were homesteading new Canadian spring wheat land. While he was growing up, going to school and farming, what Hill saw of the boom and collapse in commodity prices and land values during and after the World War period impressed him lastingly.

At Cornell University where he was awarded a scholarship in 1923, after graduating from the University of Saskatchewan and working for a time as agricultural extension agent, Hill specialized in farm management, agricultural credit, cooperative marketing and other studies accenting agricultural stability.

Later, at the Federal Land Bank of Springfield, Massachusetts, where he was agricultural statistician and comptroller, and afterward at Cornell as Research Professor of Land Economics, Hill made exhaustive studies which showed the vital importance to farmers of good soil in lifting mortgage debt. He was among the first to point out the almost universal tendency in American agriculture to over-value poor land and under-value good land in appraising farms for mortgage loans.

The new Governor has also taken a leading part in developing the 535 production credit associations and 13 banks for cooperatives, in line with the Farm Credit Administration's policy of providing a complete and permanent system of cooperative credit for farmers.

JACKSON READY AS STATE HOST

Jackson, as the capital city of Mississippi, is preparing to play host to the greatest crowds in her history during the Free State Fair to be held October 10-15.

More than half a million persons are expected to invade Jackson for the six-day event.

Preliminary plans call for elaborate decoration of downtown streets in honor of State Fair visitors. Gay pennants in the national colors will fly from every White Way pole and colored bulbs will be strung across Capitol Street to add to the carnival appearance of the city.

Jackson's police force will be augmented by a detail of safety men, recruited from the ranks of the fire department. This group will assist in directing traffic.

Everything possible will be done to make visitors feel at home in their Capitol City. Acres of free parking space will be made available to motorists adjacent to the exposition grounds. Attendants will direct parking and guard cars and contents.

Visitors from states as far away as Illinois are expected for the harvest festival. Inquiries from Evanston, Ill. indicate that a number of Illinois tourists, some of whom visited the Fair last year, plan to stop over in Jackson for several days to inspect the exhibits and visit the [illegible] city.

PRESS TO STATE FAIR OCTOBER 10

Mississippi's Fourth Estate will again be honor guests of the Free State Fair at Jackson on Monday Oct. 10.

An elaborate program of entertainment has been arranged in honor of the editors, according to Walter A. Scott, mayor and his associates, Commissioners A. F. Hawkins and R. M. Taylor.

The editors will view the spectacular opening day parade at 11 o'clock and at noon will witness the formal opening of the entrance gates.

They will be guests at an official luncheon in the Assembly Hall on the Fair grounds at 12:30 at which time Mayor Scott will extend a welcome.

During the afternoon the editors will see the auto races, the 40-odd attractions of the "world's largest midway", and at 7:30 will witness the Jackson premier of the outdoor musical extravaganza, "Follies Internationale."

PRAGUE LOOKS TO BRITAIN AND FRANCE

PRAGUE — The government of Czechoslovakia looked to Great Britain and France today for financial aid to pull through war republic through the economic shock of dismemberment under the Four-Power Munich agreement.

The extent to which Czechoslovakia will be partitioned still was uncertain. An international commission and a plebiscite eventually must fix the new frontiers. If Adolf Hitler gained all of the territory that he marked out for cession or for plebiscites on his Godesberg map, the loss to Czechoslovakia would be tremendous, but the Czechs do not expect that to happen.

PERMANENT PASTURE VALUE IS SHOWN IN NEW AAA PAMPHLET

The value of permanent pastures on Southern farms in terms of animal gains and milk or grass yields, is shown in a new pamphlet entitled "Permanent Pastures," published by the Southern Division of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, according to director E. H. White of the Mississippi Extension Service.

The publication is being distributed to interested formers thru the county agricultural agents, Mr. White said.

The material presented in Permanent Pastures is based on experiments conducted by the agricultural colleges and experiment stations in 11 Southern States. Experiments described deal with comparative value of pasture and pasture plus supplementary feed; comparative methods of pasture establishment; comparative methods of pasture improvement, and compraative methods of pasture management.

In each case the experiment is summarized in simple, nontechnical form, and that data are arranged in such manner that the reader can see the results at a glance. Where results are shown in trems of milk yields or animal gains, the use of pasture alone is compared with the use of pasture plus one or more kinds of supplementary feed. Where results are given in terms of grass yields, treated areas are compared with untreated pasture or check plots. In some experiments the relative values of individual grasses are shown.

SIX-MONTH-OLD INFANT SHOT IN TARGET PRATICE

HARDY, Ark.—A six-month-old infant, shot just above the heart with a .22 calibre rifle during target practive, probably will live, physicians said today.

The infant, Joan Sample, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Sample, apparently had suffered little ill effect from the bullet.

She was struck when her mother carried her from their yard into their house. An X-Ray revealed that the bullet had lodged in the ribs. It had not been removed.

NAIL BITING

How and Why It must be Stopped

A dangerous habit because the tiny eggs of Pin and Round Worms stick to moist skin and lodge under the nails. Once in the mouth they are naturally swallowed. That is why a child who bites nails may have Pin Worms, because it is easy to infect one's self through this dangerous habit.

The Pin or Seat Worm is the hardest to expel because it lives in the lower bowel. The female comes out on the moist membrane of the opening where it causes torturous itching, especially at night. In a single night she expels thousands of eggs, so tiny they get on the fingers and under the nails, and in this way are easily spread to others and swallowed over again by the scratching, nail-biting child. So stubborn are Pin or Seat Worms that only a highly specialized and complete 3-way treatment like JAYNE'S can give the child relief from these unseen tormentors. Your druggist has Jayne's Pin Worm Preparation. Get a package at once and apply the nail-biting preventative. A postal addressed to Dr. D. Jayne & Son, Inc., Philadelphia, will bring you a brochure on Pin Worms.

LEVEE DIRECTORS URGE THAT U. S. FLOOD CONTROL ACT BE AMENDED

(United Press)

GREENVILLE, Miss. — The Board of Mississippi River Levee Directors today urged that the United States Flood Control Act be amended so that the government would take over the Board's duties, thus removing need for its existence.

The borad dopted resolutions drawn by the president of the Board, S. D. Knowlton, which requested amendment of the Act so that the government would assume construction, provide rights of way, and supervise maintenance of the entire levee system and flood control works on the Mississippi and its tributaries from Cairo, Ill., to the Gulf of Mexico.

Knowlton's resolutions pointed out that the present flood control acts only partially authorize the government to meet the obligation of flood control as a national problem and that oleal interests provided rights of way and maintained levees after they were constructed.

RUSSIA PLANS DEFENSE

MOSCOW — Official comment was unavailable today on foreign reports that Marshal Vassily Bluecher, commander in chief of the Russian army in the Far East, had been removed from his post and imprisoned.

Bluecher's name has not appeared in the press recently.

It was disclosed a week ago, at the height of the European crisis that Kementi Voroshilow, war commissar, and Lev Mekhlis, vice commissar and head of the army political department, were at Khabarovsk, in Siberia.

The presence of these two key war officials in the Far East, thousands of miles from the treatre of possible action in Europe, was made known by newspaper articles—which did not mention Bluecher.

Gore Springs School News

Friday night, September 30th, the Gore Springs Home Economics and Agricultural students presented a box supper for the purpose of raising funds for the equipment of their department. A short play entitled "Case and Family" began the entertainment. There was also a cake for the prettiest girl and the ugliest boy, which were received by Ora Bell Lott and Mr. Brown. At a stand in the hall, girls sold iced drinks. The boxes were auctioned off by Mr. Sam Gillon. $42.32 was raised which will be used for Home Economics and Agricultural equipment. We wish to thank everyone for helping us and especially Mr. R. B. Thomason, who sent a nice basket of fruit, although he could not be with us.

Well, everybody had a grand time at the box supper, we hope—Mr. Brown did too.

Under the Auspices of the Mac Dowell Musicale.

It is always difficult to analyze the master musician, and to determine with precision just what factors contribute most to their outstanding success. Jerold Frederic, the young American virtoso who will appear in recital at the Grenada High School on Oct. 16 at 3:00 o'clock is one of those unique characters whose musical powers and attainments are difficult to analyze. However, a few characteristics are clearly discernable - in the first place, he has a musical soul. There is nothing of the mere mechanical here. He has exquisite feeling for rhythm, precision of attack, accuracy, full sonority, and a noble and natural style. Possessed of a lively imagination nd r immense depth of musical feeling, he is a master of tone quality, handling with equal facility every shade of tone from the most delicate pianissimo to the broadest and deepest fortissimo. In one mood he is a master "poet of the piano" - the most delicate phrasing and shading are his - tones so refined, so subtle that one could scarcely tell whether one is feeling or hearing them. Thus, this young artist waltzes or sings or sighs with Chopin, that master composer for the piano, in his most cheerful, dreamy or tragic mood.

He has true liantian hands, and they enabl him when in another mood to execute with facility and precision the tremendously difficult passages of the great Hungarian mast r. As Richard S. Davis, the well known music critic has said of him - "he has a most capable pair of hands and is undaunted by technical difficulties."

This young artist also has a splendid physique - great vitality - a personality that is radiant, forceful and triumphant. In his presence, there is no uneasiness, on the contrary, his commanding personality instantly puts the audience at ease, as if intuitively they are made conscious that he is not only equal to the occasion, but is in supreme command of the situation. It is confidence such as only the master aritist can inspire.

Weekly News Letter

(By W. F. Bond)

The county welfare agents during the month of August of this year delivered checks to and rendered other services for 16,486 needy aged persons; issued orders for commodities to 52,740 persons; took 11,146 WPA applications and referred them to WPA; took 593 NYA applications and referred them to headquarters; kept the roster of 6,146 young men and boys in the CCC camps; made thousands of home visits; interviewed tens of thousands of others and gave services of various kinds to many of them. The month of August is no exception. Each month means plenty of hard work for the county welfare agents who are paid a very small salary with no travel allowance. We are asking the kindly cooperation of the public for the county welfare agents of the respective counties.

Strength During MIDDLE LIFE

Strength is extra-important for women going through the change of life. Then the body needs the very best nourishment to fortify it against the changes that are taking place.

In such cases, Cardui has proved helpful to many women. It increases the appetite and aids digestion, favoring more complete transformation of food into living tissue, resulting in improved nutrition and building up and strengthening of the whole system.

CZECHS SUBMISSIVE

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 6.—New, secret proposals from Germany—proposals possibly of far reaching importance in the Sudeten-Land problem—were reported to have been considered by the cabinet today.

Gen. Flantisck Husarek, minister of public works in the new cabinet, brought the proposals by airplane from Berlin last night, and the cabinet, which had held one meeting during the evening, was called into a session at midnight.

Gen Jan Syrovys, new cabinet was working to reorient the country as the result of its dismemberment by agreement of Great Britain and France.

The resignation of President Edward Benes yesterday marked the real beginning of a new era in which it was understood the Government would abandon any idea of depending on Britain and France and turn to the Fascist-Nazi Berlin-Rome Axis for its friends.

Within one day Czechoslovakia had switched its policy completely, deciding upon a shake up of its political, military and economic structure.

After 20 years under the influence of France, Great Britain and Russia, Czechoslovakia had broken away, - determined to make the most of its future.

It was expected that negotiations for a commercial treaty with Germany would be started Oct. 15.

Foreign policy was in the hands of Mr. Frantisek Chvalkovsky, foreign minister in the new cabinet, known to be friendly to both Italy and Germany. He held a farewell conference yesterday at Rome, where he has been the Czechoslovak minister, with count Caleskio Ciano, foreign minister

WISE WIVES

The average housewife is the financial manager of the home. The task of feeding the family is left entirely up to her and, in most cases, the money that is spent for groceries is budgeted. The wise wife is the one who can stay within the budget and, at the same time, supply the family with quality foods. The wise wife shops at the Grenada Jitny-Jungle because it is the place she obtains quality for less money.
